

The following terms and conditions apply

Payment to authors and interviewees whose writings are selected for the final manuscript of the book will be, at minimum, two complementary copies of the published book. Additional compensation is possible but not guaranteed, dependent on the provisions made by the publisher.

Payment will be made upon the publication of the book.

If publication is not successfully attained, no compensation of any type will be made to authors or interviewees.

The author verifies that he/she is the exclusive author of the writing.

The Author verifies that the writing is original (planned and written by the author, not an adaptation of a piece written by someone else.

The Author or interviewee guarantees that the information in the writing is true.

The Author verifies that any prior or pending publication of the writing under consideration for this book has been discussed with and cleared by Kathy Nimmer and/or her assistant.

The Author or interviewee verifies that he/she is the holder of the legal right to grant permission to publish the writing.

The Author or interviewee verifies that publication of the writing will not infringe on any other copyright.

The Author or interviewee verifies that publication of the writing will not violate any rights of any party, including their right to privacy.

If a writing is selected for the final manuscript of this book, the Author or interviewee will be notified in writing. This will include a Contributor Agreement being issued to the Author or interviewee.

No writing will be published in this book without the Author's or interviewee's written permission.

If a writing is accepted for publication in this book, the Publisher will reserve certain rights for a certain length of time, as articulated in the Contributor Agreement, after which those reserved rights revert to the Author.

When a writing is accepted for publication in this book, the Author retains the right to publish his/her writing in a book made up solely of his/her own works and on his/her personal Web site or blog.

If a writing is accepted for publication in this book, the Author grants the Publisher or editor the right to condense, edit, and/or alter the writing, including its title, as needed for publication. Facts will never be altered in these edits.

The Author or interviewee will be given the opportunity to review, alter, and approve the line edit of the writing; if the Author and the Editor cannot agree on the line edit, the writing will not be published in the book.

Kathy Nimmer (and those representing her interests in the creation and publication of this book) reserve the right not to publish any writing submitted for publication. If a submission is not published in the book, all rights remain with the Author.